

OVERLAND | Alpine Challenge Pre-trip Training

Backpack through the Swiss Alps and experience European cultures.

Training for the Alpine Challenge requires focus, time management and dedication. In the weeks leading up to trip start, you will build your fitness by increasing your time hiking progressively. Training is essential in preparing you for a healthy and enjoyable experience on this challenging trip. Use this calendar to track your training over the 5 weeks before your trip. Hand in your completed calendar to your leaders upon arrival at trip start. Feel free to contact us with questions.

Pre-trip training:

- 5 weeks before your trip: take four 30-minute walks in your hiking boots. Walk around your house or neighborhood so your boots begin to conform to your feet.
- 4 weeks before your trip: take three 45-minute hikes over varied terrain in your boots.
- 3 weeks before your trip: take two 1½-hour hikes and one 4-hour hike over varied terrain in your boots.
- 2 weeks before your trip: take two 2-hour hikes and one 6-hour hike with a loaded backpack with 10-15% of your body weight over varied terrain in your boots .
- 1 week before your trip: take three 3-hour hikes with a backpack loaded with 25-30% of your body weight over varied terrain in your boots.

Groups typically average between 1½ and 3 miles per hour (although pace varies by group). You will take multiple breaks throughout the day—for water, snacks, lunch, to adjust packs, etc. Due to the challenge level and route on Alpine Challenge, the hiking is both physically and mentally demanding; you should expect to be hiking for most of the day.

Preparing for Hiking:

On Alpine Challenge, you will spend two days on day hikes and a total of 21 days backpacking. You will hike over challenging and varied terrain, including steep, rocky sections. You will travel to elevations above 11,000 feet and may hike on snow.

Backpacking is a strenuous physical activity and requires proper training. While backpacking, our groups are fully self-supported - meaning that you will carry all of your belongings (clothes, sleeping bag and pad), some group gear, food and water. Your leaders will distribute group gear and food among all members of the group. Pack weights will vary trip by trip, depending on the location, weather, student and the distance covered. Typically when backpacking, pack weights average about 30% of a hiker's weight.

Before your trip, we strongly advise you spend time breaking-in and adjusting to your hiking boots. We expect you to prepare adequately so you can keep up physically and participate in all of your group's activities. Please follow our guidelines as you prepare for your program.
